Las Vegas, Nevada

Release: February 14, 2019. For Immediate Release

KenQuest Medical, a company specializing in medical imaging equipment, today announced a major re-branding to the name Quest Imaging Solutions to reflect the company's evolution into a more well-rounded business model.

Ryan Switz, chief commercial officer at Quest Imaging Solutions, said, "Since we have transitioned from being a provider of almost exclusively C-arms into offering a variety of products within the imaging space, we thought it was time our name reflected our expanding capabilities."

"Although we still have over 30 years in the refurbished C-arm industry and will continue to offer the same quality products," adds Switz, "our vision is to offer a turnkey solution for surgery centers, pain management facilities, and other customers as well as provide service after their initial warranties expire."

Gary Darnell, chief executive officer of Quest Imaging Solutions says, "We are unique in that we have the expertise and the relationships to be able to offer a varied portfolio of products. Our new name will hopefully allow us to continue to expand upon our already valuable resources."
